OVID.

I HAVE made an Obſervation in the Courſe of my Reading, that no Part of Poetry ſtrikes like Deſcriptions; and I believe moſt People will agree in Opinion with me. Deſcriptions are generally formed from Ideas drawn from the Senſes, and conſequently have as great an Effect upon the Mind, as a Picture upon the Sight; but moral Diſcourſes operate very differently, and as they act with leſs Vivacity, of Courſe they require more Reaſon and Conſideration to determine our Judgments.

Who does not inſtantaneouſly form to himſelf the exact Reſemblance of Nature in a lively Deſcription of a Storm, a Battle, or a Garden? But who can, with equal Eaſe, perceive the proper Beauties neceſſary to diſtinguiſh an Orator, a King, or a General. Theſe ſeveral Characters require a peculiar Turn of Sentiment and Expreſſion, which very few People have Judgment to diſtinguiſh.

As the Propriety or Impropriety of a Deſcription is immediately perceived, ſo there is a general and almoſt uniform Similitude in thoſe of the ſame Object, drawn by different Authors. A Picture of the ſame Perſon by ſeveral Artiſts, may reſemble each other, ſo that one may fix upon the Object which they intended to repreſent; and yet at the ſame Time, the Degrees of Likeneſs, and the various Manner of expreſſing it, make a very apparent and pleaſing Variety.

Amongſt the numerous kinds of Deſcriptions, I think, none have been more generally recommended than thoſe of the Morning. The Heroick Poets ſeem to have exerciſed all their Talents in varying them: They have ſported with their Imaginations almoſt to Extravagance. I have collected together ſome few Inſtances which may not be unacceptable to the Reader. The following is from Virgil, in Mr. Dryden's Tranſlation.

Aurora now had left her ſaffron bed,
And beams of early light the heav'ns o'erſpread.
The morn began from Ida to diſplay
Her roſy cheeks, and Phoſphor led the day.

It will be endleſs and indeed unneceſſary, to multiply Examples out of all the Antients, and therefore I have produced ſome from our modern Writers. Both Taſſo and Spencer have ſucceeded admirably in this Deſcription, but ſuperior to them all are thoſe of Shakeſpeare, and the following Inſtance is a ſtriking one.

Look where the morn, in ruſſet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eaſtern hill.

In another Place he has embelliſh'd it thus,

——— ——— ——— ——— Look what ſtreaks
Do lace the ſevering clouds in yonder eaſt,
Night's tapers are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the miſty mountain-tops.

The two following Deſcriptions are quite poetical.

The glow-worm ſhews the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire.

——— ——— ——— ——— ——— You grey lines
That fret the clouds, are meſſengers of day.

That admirable Deſcription in Otway's Orphan, affords more Diverſity of Images than any of the reſt.

Wiſh'd morning's come ———

I am not ſo attached to the Antients, as to give them the Preference in this Part of Poetry, tho' moſt People are ſo bigotted to their Beauties, that they will allow little or no Excellence in the modern Writers: For my Part, I muſt confeſs, that I cannot find in any of the Antients, that Elegance of Sentiment, or Luxuriancy of Fancy, which many modern Writers have exemplified in their beautiful Deſcriptions of the Morning.

JAMAICA, ſs.

To his Excellency CHARLES KNOWLES, Eſq; captain-general, governor, and commander in chief, in and over this his majeſty's iſland of Jamaica, and other the territories thereon depending in America, chancellor, and vice-admiral of the ſame, &c.

The humble ADDRESS of the Aſſembly.

May it pleaſe your excellency,

WE beg leave to return your excellency our hearty thanks for your ſpeech at the opening of this ſeſſion, and to aſſure your excellency that it cannot but be matter of the greateſt concern to us, not to have your approbation of ſuch meaſures as we have judged neceſſary for the public utility, being ſatisfied that your excellency's only aim has been to promote his majeſty's ſervice, and the peace and welfare of this colony.

We have taken into our moſt ſerious conſideration, the ſeveral important matters recommended to us, and as we have had the moſt diſtinguiſhed marks of his majeſty's royal and paternal care, your excellency cannot doubt of our moſt inviolable attachment to ſo gracious a ſovereign, and of our readineſs of complying with his commands in every inſtance conſiſtent with the truſts repoſed in us by the People, and thoſe rights which we do moſt humbly apprehend ourſelves intitled to, under the happy influence of his majeſty's mild government.

We beg leave humbly to lay before your excellency the annexed reſolutions, which we hope will be ſufficient to juſtify our proceedings to your excellency.

Paſſed the aſſembly, the 30th of Oct. 1753.

RESOLVED, That it is the inherent and undoubted right of the repreſentatives of the people, to raiſe and apply monies for the ſervices and exigencies of government, and to appoint ſuch perſon or perſons for the receiving and iſſuing thereof as they ſhall think proper, which rights this houſe hath exerted, and will always exert, in ſuch manner as they ſhall judge moſt conducive to the ſervice of his majeſty, and the intereſt of his people.

Reſolved, That it appears by the letters patent, under the great ſeal of England, granted to Sir Thomas Lynch, Knt. by his late majeſty King Charles II. in the thirty-third year of his reign, appointing him the ſaid Sir Thomas Lynch, captain-general and governor of this iſland; and by all the letters patent of his ſaid majeſty and his ſucceſſors, to this preſent time, appointing captains-general, governors, and commanders in chief of this iſland, and by many other authentic records, that the council and aſſembly of this iſland, from that time to this day, enjoyed the right of propoſing laws, ſtatutes and ordinances for the public peace, welfare and good government of this iſland, and that nothing might be paſſed or done by the ſaid council and aſſembly to the prejudice of the crown. That the ſaid captains-general, governors, or commanders in chief of this iſland for the time being, have enjoyed a negative voice in the making and paſſing all ſuch laws, ſtatutes and ordinances, and that ſuch laws, ſtatutes and ordinances, have been and were in full force and effect, according to the tenor of them, from the time the ſaid captains-general, governors or commanders in chief, gave their aſſent to them, until they were diſallowed by the crown, and ſuch diſallowance ſignified to ſuch captains-general, governors or commanders in chief. And that the ſaid method of propoſing, making and paſſing of laws, and of their being in force, and of their diſallowance by the crown, is as nearly agreeable to the prerogative of the crown of England, and of the rights and privileges of the people of that kingdom, to which the people of this iſland are undoubtedly intitled, as the diſtant ſituation of this iſland can admit of.

Reſolved, That it doth appear, that no clauſe hath ever been inſerted in any act, of a public nature, paſſed by the legiſlature of this iſland, ſuſpending the execution thereof 'till his majeſty's pleaſure ſhould be known.

Reſolved, That if ſuch a clauſe had been inſerted in acts heretofore paſſed by the legiſlature of this iſland; this iſland could not have been preſerved from its foreign and inteſtine enemies.

Reſolved, That if ſuch a clauſe ſhould be inſerted in Acts to be hereafter paſſed in this iſland, and the legiſlature ſhould be thereby delayed upon emergent occaſions from exerting the utmoſt force of the whole iſland, as well of money as men, to defend and preſerve themſelves and their fellow-ſubjects, his majeſty may be in danger of loſing the colony, and his people their lives, liberty and property.

Reſolved, That the inſerting ſuch a clauſe in acts to be paſſed by the legiſlature of this iſland, may be attended with this manifeſt inconvenience to the inhabitants thereof, inaſmuch as ſuch acts after they ſhall paſs, may lie for many years without being offered to his majeſty for his royal pleaſure thereupon, as many heretofore paſſed have done, and now do; which if it ſhould happen, would be of much worſe conſequence than the diſallowance of them by his majeſty could be: For in the one caſe, his majeſty, from his moſt gracious condeſcenſion, is generally pleaſed to permit his reaſons for ſuch diſallowance to be ſet forth in the ſubſtance of the ſame. The legiſlature of this iſland might therefrom be acquainted with the objections that were made to them, and might have an opportunity of framing other acts in ſuch a manner as would be free from thoſe objections, and agreeable to his majeſty's ſentiments; and in the mean time, until his majeſty's diſallowance of ſuch acts ſhould be ſignified, they would be in force, and thereby ſome [illegible] improper ones (as his majeſty's opinion) be provided againſt evils or inconveniencies that may happen; whereas, in the other caſe, let the evils or inconveniences be ever ſo great, which the legiſlature ſhould be deſirous of redreſſing or preventing by their acts, they muſt patiently bear them, and wait the event of the remedies they had provided, without having it in their power either to preſent them to his majeſty, to know his pleaſure thereupon, or to take any new methods to help themſelves whilſt the former ſhould be in ſuſpence.

Reſolved, That as the inſerting ſuch ſuſpending clauſes in bills of a public nature to be paſſed by the legiſlature of this iſland, will not be for his majeſty's ſervice, or the peace, welfare, good-government and ſecurity of this iſland, but on the contrary, will endanger the former, and be prejudicial to the crown; and as ſuch inſertion will be a very great alteration of the known and eſtabliſhed conſtitution of this iſland, and as the ſame is derogatory to the undoubted right the ſubject hath of propoſing laws to the crown: This houſe cannot conſent to the inſertion of ſuch clauſes in public bills, without giving up the right of the people, their own liberties, and the happy conſtitution which they have enjoyed under his preſent moſt gracious majeſty and his royal predeceſſors, for above ſeventy years.

To which his Excellency was pleaſed to return the following ANSWER.

Mr. ſpeaker, and gentlemen of the aſſembly.

I Thank you for this very kind Addreſs, and the juſt ſentiments you expreſs for my adminiſtration.

The Reſolutions annexed to your Addreſs I ſhall take into conſideration, and compare with his majeſty's inſtructions, whoſe commands I am in duty bound to obey.

The Remainder of
An Eſſay on the Government of CHILDREN, under three general Heads, Health, Manners, and Education. By James Nelſon, Apothecary. Begun in our Paper before the laſt.

The ſecond general Head is MANNERS.

THE government of children, with reſpect to manners, cannot be diſtinct from Education, otherwiſe than a part from the whole. By

By manners, the author means that part of education by which moral principles are inculcated, and habits of virtue begun, and by education he means that part of it only which is confined to mere natural knowledge.

Under the head of manners he remarks, that children contract habits, and may be taught either vice or virtue much sooner than is generally imagined: That they distinguish the conduct of those about them before they can speak, and will be froward with one and orderly with another, in proportion as a proper authority has been preserved, and as they have been unreasonably humoured or indiscreetly check'd. The parent is earnestly intreated for the present peace and future welfare of the child, to maintain his authority, and be punctually obeyed from the first moment a command is understood; by this means he will be able to regulate passions, to quiet discontent, to be in every respect the substitute of reason to the infant 'till its own is sufficiently informed, corrected, and invigorated to do the same office. This would put an end to perpetual fretfulness, to a clamorous importunity for every thing that is new, to an obstinate refusal to take medicine, to irregularities, which make life wearisome to the child and all about it. It would prevent the practice of bribery, dissimulation and falsehood, to effect an immediate purpose, and the low mercenary and dishonest principles such practice must produce.

To obtain and preserve this authority, parents should never shew extreme anger or excessive fondness; should never allow at one time that which at another they forbid, nor negligently suffer any breach of their authority, merely because it happens to produce no immediate mischief: They must correct with steadiness, but not in fury, nor will much correction be long, if at all, necessary, because when commands have been from the first properly enforced, the least intimation, even by a look, will be sufficient; for it is only the hope of conquest that produces the contention.

Under this head are innumerable precepts and cautions of the utmost importance, illustrated by examples, which render them entertaining, but they cannot be reduced like the directions head, to give new [illegible] already known. The absurdity of setting every boy to write verses, and pursuing the same tract, whatever be the inclination, capacity, fortune, or intended profession of the scholar, has been sufficiently exposed. In general, if those lads who are intended for trade and business, were, instead of the dead languages, to learn English, writing, and arithmetic, the rudiments of geography and drawing, they would obtain an acquisition, which as it would be perpetually useful, would scarce ever be lost.

The SPEECH of the Honorable ROBERT DINWIDDIE, Esq; Lieut. Governor, &c. of Virginia, to the Assembly, on the 19th of Dec. 1753.

Gentlemen of the council, Mr. Speaker, and gentlemen of the house of burgesses,

THE season of the year being far advanced, and the business of the assembly concluded, it is necessary to put an end to this session.

That zeal for his majesty's service, that disinterested love for your country, for which you have been distinguished upon former occasions, has now, in some particulars, not been sufficiently attended to. The friendship of the Indians is a national concern. The interest of Great Britain, the welfare of all his majesty's colonies on this continent, and your own peace and safety are engaged upon the event of the present measures.

Gentlemen of the house of burgesses,

His majesty's royal command, for a mutual supply, recommended to you at the beginning of this session, to preserve the friendship of the Indians, to consult the real prosperity of your country, and at the same time to preserve the just rights of the crown, should have been the fixed object of your attention; but to disregard the designs of the French, to despise the friendship of the Indians, and to dispute the rights of the crown in the disposal of their own lands, may be of bad consequence.

Next to the service of my royal master, my greatest ambition will be to make this dominion flourish, and the people happy; such will be my endeavours, and such is the whole tenor of my conduct.

Let me therefore, Gentlemen, recommend to you, and desire of you, during your recess in the different counties, to cultivate piety and morality, by which you will promote the true happiness of the people; encourage industry, to preserve good order and regularity among them, that they may be truly fruitful of the most valuable blessings of his majesty's reign.

I have thought fit to prorogue this assembly to the last thursday of April next: And you are accordingly prorogued.

WILLIAMSBURG in VIRGINIA, Febr. 15.

Yesterday the General Assembly of this Colony met in Pursuance of the Lieutenant Governor's Proclamation, when his Honour opened the Session with the following SPEECH.

Gentlemen of the council, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the house of burgesses,

NOTHING less than a very important concern could have induced me to call you together again, after so short a recess; but the dignity of the crown of Great Britain, the welfare of all the colonies on this continent, and more especially of this dominion, engage me to have your advice and assistance in an affair of the greatest consequence.

Major Washington, who was sent by me to the commandant of the French forces on the river Ohio, being returned, informs me he found that officer at a fort they had erected on a creek running into the Ohio, and that they were then preparing all necessaries for building another fort on that river; that they had 220 canoes made, and many more rough hewed, to be made, in order to transport, early this spring, a great number of regular forces, not less than fifteen hundred men, with their Indians in friendship with them, down the river Ohio, in order to build many more fortresses on it; and they proposed Logs-Town to be the chief place of their rendezvous.

Major Washington further reports, that he asked, "Why they had seized the goods of our traders, and "sent their persons prisoners to Canada?" To which the commandant answered, That his orders from their general, the governor of Canada, were, Not to permit any English subjects to trade on the waters of the Ohio, but to seize their goods, and send them prisoners to Quebeck. He also asked the reason of taking Mr. Frazer's house from him, which he had built and lived in upwards of twelve years? He said, That man was lucky that he had made his escape, or he would have sent him prisoner to Canada.

These transactions are entirely inconsistent with the treaties subsisting between the two crowns, and contrary to my instructions from his majesty, whereby I am directed to prevent any foreign power settling or building any fortresses on his majesty's lands.

Add to the afore mentioned unjustifiable insults of the French, the cruel and barbarous murder, in cool blood, of a whole family in this dominion, man, wife, and five children, so longer ago than last month; and very lately a poor man, on the south branch of Patowmack, robbed of his son. These depredations most savage barbarities, inexorable to the parent's intreaties, insensible to the cries of the tender infant, basely determined to destroy, without provocation, those who could not resist their violence.

Think you see the infant torn from the unavailing struggles of the distracted mother, the daughters ravished before the eyes of their wretched parents; and then, with cruelty and insult, butchered and scalped. Suppose the horrid scene completed, and the whole family, man, wife, and children (as they were) murdered and scalped by these relentless savages, and then torn in pieces, and in part devoured by wild beasts, for whom they were left a prey by their more brutal enemies.

But how must your indignation rise when you extend your view to the abettors of these villainies. Such are the people whose neighbourhood you must now prevent, or with the most probable expectation think to see, in the bosom of your country, these evils, that you as yet have only the melancholy tidings of from your frontiers.

Consider the bloody villains, thievishly lurking about a man's plantation, and where they dare not attack like men, basely, like vermin, stealing and carrying away, the helpless infant, that happened to wander, though but a little distance from his father's threshold.

I assure you, Gentlemen, these insults on our sovereign's protection, and barbarities on our fellow-subjects, make deep impressions on my heart; and I doubt not, as you must hear them with horror and resentment, but you will enable me, by a full and sufficient supply, to exert the most vigorous efforts, to secure the rights, and assert the honour and dignity of our sovereign; to drive away these cruel and treacherous invaders of your properties, and destroyers of your families, and thereby to gratify my warmest wishes in establishing the security and prosperity of Virginia, on the most solid and permanent foundations.

Gentlemen of the house of burgesses,

I must earnestly recommend to you his majesty's commands, for a proper supply, the immediate necessity whereof, at this time, I desire you will seriously consider, and by a ready and effectual compliance, recommend yourselves and the country to his royal favour.

This is your part, Gentlemen. —— What I could, before your meeting, I have done for the public; and by the advice of the council I have array'd some part of the militia, which I have ordered up to the Ohio, with all possible expedition, to build a fort there, at the forks of Monongahela. And as his majesty's gracious present of thirty pieces of cannon, eighty barrels of powder, and other ordnance stores suitable, are arrived, I have sent ten of the cannon, and a proportion of ammunition, to Alexandria, to be from thence transported as soon as possible to the Ohio.

I have wrote to the neighbouring colonies for their aid and assistance, which I have good reason to expect; but I must observe to you, that their eyes are fixed on your proceedings, and I hope you will engage them, by a laudable example, to contribute sufficiently for the common cause.

The late occasion have suggested to me some defects in the Act for making provision against invasions and insurrections, I think proper to observe to you, that the pay is very unequally proportioned, being too high for the soldier, and too low for the officer; and there is no provision made for a doctor, a commissary of stores, and several other requisites — I think it would be better to pay the militia in money than tobacco, by which there may be a saving to the country, and the militia better satisfied.

Gentlemen of the council, and gentlemen of the house of burgesses,

I look upon the safety and welfare of Virginia to depend on your councils and determinations, at this critical juncture, which therefore ought to be uninterrupted by any avocations from prejudice, or unseasonable divisions, at all times the bane of public consultations, but which, at present, would be particularly fatal; and I doubt not, when you seriously consider the importance of what is laid before you, you will find duty, honour, and your own preservation, all united, to engage you to exert your efforts equal to the occasion.

The season for entering upon action being so near at hand, your session can be but short, and I desire to conclude with an earnest exhortation to concord and expedition, lest if we be divided or slow in deliberation, our enemies may seize the time we lose, and render any future efforts ineffectual.

And in all measures for his majesty's service, and the good of this colony, you will have my ready and zealous concurrence.

CHARLES-TOWN, April 2.

The Charming Nancy, of and from this Port for London, (Capt. White) was spoke with in the Channel, in January last, very much disabled in a Gale of Wind she met with off the Banks of Newfoundland, about 6 Hours after she had taken up the Crew of a French Ship that had foundered.

[illegible] on Sunday Evening, his Majesty's [illegible] boarded a Snow from Barbados, with some Negroes on board, the same Night, since which the Pilot-Boat has not been seen or heard of. Mr. Edwards (another of our Pilots) was on board the Ship William Galley, Capt. Bell, a good Way to Windward of the Rebecca, when Mr. Tucker boarded her; so that she and the Snow may be expected in every Hour.

There are now 53 Vessels in this Harbour, viz. 14 Ships, 16 Snows, 6 Brigantines, 5 Schooners, and 11 Sloops: And there arrived in the Course of the last Month 51 Sail, which has lowered Freights considerably.
